Spiritual Formation & Transformation: God & Human Collaboration

Dates: 11 – 15 July 2016 (Mon-Fri)
Venue: STM Campus, Seremban

This is an Elective course offered by STM for the Doctor of Ministry program students. For more info, check our website under Academic on the Menu page.

Course Intention
Participants are invited to be on a journey of critical reflection on spiritual formation in our contemporary culture. This is not purely out of an academic interest, but with the hope of establishing holistic understanding of spiritual formational process that transform our lives personally and communally as a faith community. Spiritual formation does not automatically bring about transformation of life apart from God’s initiative in collaboration with human responses in the multidimensional milieu of our personal and situational contexts. The Course attempts to consider the various components of formation, information, conformation, reformation and transformation through the impacts of human development within the familial, social, cultural, and religious matrix. Prayer exercises are designed to allow participants to interact with God and to intentionally engage in the transformational process concerning any unconverted areas of their lives that await God’s redemptive actions. By God’s grace, we shall become more whole and holy in conforming to Christ our Lord in whom we live, move and have our beings for the Glory of God our Father.
