Pneumatology & Anthropology

Course Description

Theological anthropology concerns human beings and their relationship with God. It addresses humans as created in the image of God, with a special qualitative relation to God compared to other species. Sin is the corruption of the relation, indicating that humans are constitutionally opposed to God. Theological anthropology also deals with the restoration of the human relationship with God through the application of the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Pneumatology concerns the person and work of the Holy Spirit, who indwells, empowers and gifts believers.
